

Major Themes in Catholic Social Teaching

1) Dignity of the Human Person

Belief in the inherent dignity of the human person is the foundation of all Catholic Social Teaching. Human life is sacred, and the dignity of the human person is the starting point for a moral vision for society. This principle is grounded in the idea that each person is made in the image of God. Each person is a reflection of God among us.

Since we are reflections of God's image, we are wonderful and creative beings as we are. Our dignity does not come from what we have or what we do; it comes from being God's special creation. We don't need excess material goods to achieve self-worth; similarly, people's actions or situation do not change their worth.

2) Common Good and Community

The human person is both sacred and social. We realize our dignity and rights in relationship with others, in community. Human beings grow and achieve fulfillment in community. Human dignity can only be realized and protected in the context of relationship with the wider society.

How we organize our society – in economics and politics, in law and policy – directly affects human dignity and the capacity of individuals to grow in community. The obligation to love our neighbor has an individual dimension, but it also requires a broader social commitment. Everyone has a responsibility to contribute to the good of the whole society, to the common good.

3) Rights and Responsibilities

Human dignity can be protected and a healthy community can be achieved only if human rights are protected and responsibilities are met. Every person has a fundamental right to life and a right to those things required for human decency – starting with food, shelter and clothing, employment, health care, and education. Corresponding to these rights are duties and responsibilities -- to one another, to our families, and to the larger society.

4) Option for the Poor

The moral test of a society is how it treats its most vulnerable members. The poor have the most urgent moral claim on our collective conscience. We are called to look at public policy decisions in terms of how they affect the poor. The "option for the poor" is not an adversarial slogan that pits one group or one class against another. Rather, it states that the deprivation and powerlessness of the poor wounds the whole community.

The option for the poor is an essential part of society's effort to achieve the common good. A community can be healthy only if its members give special attention to those with special needs, to those who are on the margins of society.

5) Role of Government and Subsidiarity

The state has a positive moral function. It is an instrument to promote human dignity, protect human rights, and build the common good. All people have a right and a responsibility to participate in political institutions so that government can achieve its proper goals. The principle of subsidiarity holds that the functions of government should be performed at the lowest level possible, as long as they can be performed adequately. When the needs in question cannot adequately be met at the lower level, then it is not only necessary, but imperative that higher levels of government intervene.

6) Economic Justice

The economy must serve the people, not the other way around. All workers have a right to productive work, to decent and fair wages, and to safe working conditions. They also have a fundamental right to organize and join unions. People have a right to economic initiative and private property, but these rights have limits. No one should be allowed to amass excessive wealth when others lack the basic necessities of life; a free market does not automatically produce justice. There are many needs that cannot be satisfied by a market system, and it is our task as a community to ensure that these needs are met.

7) Stewardship of God's Creation

The goods of the earth are gifts from God, and they are intended by God for the benefit of everyone. We have a responsibility to care for God-given resources as stewards and trustees, not as mere consumers and users. To this end, we are called to be co-creative with God in returning and restoring to the Earth that which we take from it. How we treat the environment is a measure of our stewardship, a sign of our respect for the Creator.

8) Participation

All people have a right to participate in the economic, political, and cultural life of society. It is a fundamental demand of justice and a requirement for human dignity that all people be assured a minimum level of participation in the community. It is wrong for a person or a group to be excluded unfairly or to be unable to participate in society.

9) Promotion of Peace and Disarmament

Catholic teaching promotes peace as an all-encompassing, action-oriented concept. In the words of Pope John Paul II, "Peace is not just the absence of war. It involves mutual respect and confidence between peoples and nations. It involves collaboration and binding agreements.” Peace, however, cannot be achieved absent of justice. Peace is the fruit of justice and is dependent upon right order among human beings.

10) Global Solidarity and Development

We are one human family. Solidarity means that we share in one another’s joys and successes, and in one another’s sorrows and failures, as if they were our own. Our responsibilities to each other cross national, racial, economic and ideological differences. We are called to work globally for justice. Authentic development must be full human development. It must respect and promote personal, social, economic and political rights. Accumulating material goods and technical resources is unsatisfactory and debasing if there is no respect for the moral, cultural, and spiritual dimensions of the person.
